Dear Brian Amme:

- 1 It is my opinion the spraying herbicides throughout many western states to control plant and weed growth is the wrong choice when you have Option 3 available. I've taken a look at the BLM proposal. I urge you to use Option 3.
- 2 Doesn't using herbicide spraying remind you of all the quick fix drugs the FDA allows on the market as safe, but then, later, discovery of many adverse side affects are disclosed? The drug companies don't give a damn about side affects unless they're caught. But that's always after the fact, isn't it. It is the same with the proponents of spraying herbicides, or should I say, the manufacturers of these poisons. As long as they can down play side affects, or keep a lid on them, they don't give a damn about adverse side affects. Do you "wanna" bet?

For an environment with less poisons in it,
George Loveday
